development, and called for greater transparency and accountability for how businesses address risks of human rights violations. “States must set a clear vision for connecting the increasing role of the private sector and businesses in development with accountability and agreed standards for business practices aligned with human rights,” the independent expert group said in a letter to lead negotiators as they entered the final stages of negotiating the ‘Post-2015 Sustainable Development Agenda.’ They caution that business activities can undermine respect for human rights if not properly regulated. Read more here. The letter of the Working Group on business and human rights is available here. Read the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights here.

8 July 2015 / 20th Anniversary Commemoration of Srebrenica - UN Deputy Secretary-General: The World Expects the UN to Uphold the Right of All People to Live in Peace and Dignity:

The United Nations Security Council held a meeting to commemorate the twentieth anniversary of the massacres in Srebrenica at UN Headquarters on 8 July 2015. In a statement to the Security Council the High Commissioner for Human Rights, Zeid Ra’ad Al Hussein, briefly narrated the key events leading up to the massacres in Srebrenica. He went on to describe the real sound of genocide as not the howling of machine-guns but the “dull, low moaning of ten thousand and more living victims of genocide – all the mothers, the sisters and daughters of the murdered 8000 boys and men.”

The Deputy Secretary-General, Jan Eliasson, affirmed to the Security Council that “the world looks to us here at the United Nations and to the UN Security Council and expects us to uphold [the right of all people to live in peace and dignity] and to meet those aspirations. That is our shared responsibility today. And it is how we can best pay homage to the victims of Srebrenica.” Read more here. 8 July 2015 / Can Violations of Economic, Social and Cultural Rights Be Predictors of Conflict?: On 8 July 2015 an expert meeting was held on the integration of economic, social and cultural rights into conflict early warning systems. The meeting sought to shed light on the links between the denial of economic, social and cultural rights and ensuing violence, unrest and conflict. If there are linkages, the possibility of discerning patterns that can be included in models for early warning and coordinated action – such as the Human Rights Up Front initiative – to strengthen prospects for peace and true development. Read more here. 15 June 2015 / UN Human Rights Chief Opens 29th Session of Human Rights Council - Integration of Human Rights into New Development Agenda can be a Turning Point: While 70 years of work by the United Nations has helped build a formidable system of rights protections, the nagging persistence of “everything else” – wars and ongoing deprivation – is deeply worrying, the top UN human rights official declared, urging renewed action to promote economic and social rights for all and tackle pervasive discrimination and repression. Zeid Ra’ad Al Hussein, the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, stressed in his opening remarks to the 29th session of the Geneva-based Human Rights Council that 2015 is a year of “vast opportunity for development,” with the summit on the post-2015 development agenda in September in New York. “The integration of human rights in that agenda can become a turning point. Sustainable development is about freedom from fear and freedom from want for all,” he concluded. Read more here.

13 June 2015 / Water Will Be Prominent in the Sustainable Development Goals - UN Chief States: Water Is Dignity. Water is a Human Right: The UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon stated that the prominence of water among the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) will greatly surpass its placement among the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) at a celebration of the achievements of the “Decade for Action: Water for Life 2005-2015” in Dushanbe, Tajikistan. He emphasized that “Water is life. Water is health. Water is dignity. Water is a human right.” The shape of international development over the next decade and a half will be determined by the Post 2015 Development Agenda. He affirmed that the road to development must be sustained by a deep commitment to human rights. A vital first step in establishing peoples and local communities as “right holders” and not clients or aid recipients is to ensure that the goals and targets relating to water and sanitation are rooted in the human rights framework and establishes the obligations of States as “duty-bearers.” Read more here.

NEWS FROM THE HUMAN RIGHTS MECHANISMS

3 July 2015 / UPR Outcome Reports of 14 Countries Were Agreed at the 29th Session of the Human Rights Council – General Debate Held on the Universal Periodic Review: During the UPR segment at the 29th session (15 June - 3 July 2015), the Human Rights Council adopted the UPR outcome reports of the 14 countries reviewed in the 21st UPR Working Group session in January - February 2015 (Armenia, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Kenya, Kiribati, Kyrgyzstan, Kuwait, Lao People’s Democratic Republic, Lesotho, Spain, Sweden, Turkey). With the adoption of these outcomes by the Human Rights Council, 126 countries have now completed their reviews in the UPR 2nd cycle. The Human Rights Council also held a general debate on the Universal Periodic Review and stressed the importance of following-up and implementing recommendations in order to have impact on the ground. It was recalled that recommendations had to be concrete, action-oriented and implementable. Furthermore, States had to present a reasonable number of recommendations to avoid overloading the system. The principles of universality, dialogue, equality, objectivity, independence and impartiality were also reiterated. Read more here. 22-26 June 2015 / 27th Meeting of Chairpersons of Human Rights Treaty Bodies: Greater Cooperation Between International and Regional Human Rights Protection Systems Deepened – Joint Statement on Post-2015 Released: The 27th meeting of Chairpersons of human rights Treaty Bodies was held in San Jose, Costa Rica from 22 to 26 June 2015 which included meeting with the Inter-American Commission of Human Rights and the Inter-American Court on Human Rights in order to deepen cooperation between the international and the regional protection systems for the benefit of right-holders and contributing towards coherence in international law. The Chairpersons encouraged, inter alia, individual treaty bodies to intensify cooperation with the Inter-American and other regional human rights systems. Additionally, the Chairpersons released a joint statement at the meeting which emphasized that “it is critical that the mainstreaming of human rights in the Post-2015 Development Agenda is captured” in the discussions on financing for development to ensure equitable and inclusive development without discrimination. They also underlined the “synergy between human rights, sustainable development and the environment.” Read more here. 5 June 2015 / Human Rights and the Environment – UN Experts: Our Generation Must Meet the Great Challenge:

A group of 28 United Nations independent experts urged governments worldwide to make sure human rights are at the core of climate change governance, including by signing the Geneva Pledge for Human Rights in Climate Action to promote and respect human rights in climate action. “Bringing a human rights perspective to climate change not only clarifies what is at stake; it also helps to ensure that responses are coherent, effective and responsive to the concerns of those most affected,” the experts noted. UN experts have warned earlier this year that the 2 degrees goal being discussed “is not ambitious enough to protect human rights” in a report presented to the UNFCCC to warn States about the threats to the rights to life, health, food and water and sanitation if the world temperature warms just 2 degrees. Read more here. ## UN WORK IN FOCUS

13-16 July 2015 / UN Women and OHCHR Push for Transformative Development Agenda That Balances Human Rights - Third International Conference on Financing for Development

(Contributions received from Nerea Craviotto, AWID / WWG on FfD): UN Women and OHCHR co-sponsored a workshop on financing for women’s development, human rights and gender equality during the Third International Conference on Financing for Development (FfD3) that was held in

Addis Ababa on 13-16 July. With the outcomes of FfD3 expected to impact the ability of States to fulfill their human rights obligations, including the Sustainable Development Goals, workshop participants examined the implications for financing human rights, gender equality and economic justice within the financing for development process.

The challenges that development financing present for gender equality and human rights, including women’s rights were discussed as well as what actions can be taken to ensure a human rights balance while pushing for a transformative development agenda. A statement delivered at FfD3 on behalf of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, Mr. Zeid Ra’ad Al Hussein, stated that “financing for development must satisfy the demands of all persons to have their most basic needs met in a world that does not lack the means, but has failed to demonstrate the will, to make human rights a reality for all.” Read more on the workshop here. Read the full statement of the High Commissioner for Human Rights here.

1 July 2015 / Human Rights Advisers Contribute to UN Agencies Successes in Realizing Human Rights: The impact of Human Rights Advisers were presented by Flavia Pansieri, Deputy High Commissioner for Human Rights and Co-Chair of the UNDG Human Rights Working Group, to the 29th session of the Human Rights Council. She provided an overview of successes, good practices, challenges and lessons learned in the implementation of OHCHR and relevant UN Agencies technical assistance and capacity building support in cooperation with Members States. Among the examples were a number of initiatives by Human Rights Advisers of the UNDG Human Rights Working Group. In Timor-Leste, the Human Rights Adviser supported the preparations for a National Human Rights Action Plan in cooperation with the National Directive Commission led by the Ministry of Justice. In Tanzania, the Human Rights Adviser and the United Nations Country Team are working with the Government, the National Human Rights Institute and civil society to raise awareness and put in place measures to address the issue of discrimination, exclusion and violence against people with albinism. Read more here. harnessing the UNs comparative advantage at UN DOCO’s seminar on Delivering in a Post-2015 World in Geneva. The High Commissioner, in a conversation that ranged from human rights as the UN’s common purpose to Human Rights up Front, highlighted the importance of Resident Coordinators to the UN development system as “the eyes and ears and brains of the UN on site to distill the information for us.” He also stated that “the right to development must be something ensured but it has to be done through a human rights sensitive lense where the dignity and worth of every individual is secured.” The overall objectiveof the Seminar was to provide a forum to better understand how “Delivering Together” will facilitate the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals. Watch a video of the High Commissioner’s interview here. ## REPORTS, ARTICLES AND BOOKS

Article, 28 July 2015 / Demystifying Universal Periodic Review / Jessica Braver: The author examines the role of the UN Resident Coordinator (RC) system in mainstreaming human rights, encouraging colleagues to work together in a more cohesive and coherent way. The author states that in Argentina, the Resident Coordinator's office has been working on positioning the topic in the UN agenda, as well as on building an inter-agency culture for the Universal Periodic Review, so as to install human rights mainstreaming as a priority. Read the entire article here.

Publication, 27 July 2015 / Handy Guide on UN Coherence / UNSSC and UNICEF: The guide addresses UN coherence issues relevant to UN staff by providing a simple summary of official guidance, and in many cases linking to it. The guide also gives an overview of UNDG country programming principles including the human rights-based approach. A joint product of UNICEF and the UN System Staff College, the Handy Guide aims to help UN agencies and staff partner together to achieve results on the ground. The guide is available for download here.

Article, 23 July 2015 / The Case for a Rights-Based Development Sensitive Approach to Drug Control Policy / UNDP: The author examines the complex and multifaceted relationship between drug control policy and human development and their shared objective to reduce drug-related harms. Yet drug control, human rights, public health and human development agendas often exist in isolation from each other. The author recommends that specific guidelines on human rights should be developed to guide the development of rights-based drug control measures. Read more here.

Article, 21 July 2015 / How Can We Harness Supply Chains for the Sustainable Development Goals? Bring Children's Rights Back in / UNICEF: This article explores the crucial role of business in the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals. In order to deliver a framework that includes vast ambitions ranging from ending abuse, exploitation, trafficking and all forms of violence against children, to achieving full and productive employment and decent work for all, the author argues that the business sector must be engaged. The article also raises the question of how global value chains can be directed towards these goals and targets. Read more here.

Article, 2 June 2015 / Breaking the Accountability Taboo in Sustainable Development Negotiations / Center for Economic and Social Rights: The author provides an overview of the human rights elements of the post-2015 discussions from the perspective of civil society. She looks at the role of civil society in the negotiations in keeping pressure on states to agree to a monitoring and review architecture that can contribute to more effective, empowering and rights-realizing implementation. Read more here.

HuriTALK NETWORK HAPPENINGS

Query / Mobile Human Rights Initiatives in Post Natural Disaster Situations: Tek Tamata, UNDP Nepal is requesting experiences and resources from the UN development and human rights community about mobile human right initiatives in post natural disaster situations in order to respond to post-disaster human rights violation cases and ensuring that the human rights-based approach is better mainstreamed in the planning and implementation of early recovery packages. He was particularly interested in the following: Operational guideline and policies, if any; Checklist for human rights monitoring; Code of conducts of the members of mobile human rights camps etc.; Any innovative interventions on coordination, advocacy and mobilization; Lessons learnt, case studies worth emulating. Submission are still welcome. Please send them to humanrights-talk@groups.undp.org.

INFO / Findings from the Study on the Interplay between RBM and HRBA in UN programming: Teresa Albero, OHCHR shared the final report of her sabbatical research on the interplay between Results-Based Management (RBM) and the Human Rights-Based Approach (HRBA) in UN common strategic programming at the country level. The author states that while the samples are not representative, the evidence gathered is enough to draw some general conclusions and recommendations. The findings of the research seem to corroborate the assumption that while complementary, the concurrent application of RBM and HRBA can generate tensions that, if ignored, threaten to reverse the hierarchy, turning RBM, in theory an enabling tool, into the ultimate ruling principle of UN programming. The report includes a number of recommendations which the author hopes will contribute to the on-going discussion on UN common programming guidelines. To request a copy of the full report, or to provide feedback on the report, please write to humanrights-talk@groups.undp.org.
